New Video Shows Why EyeDetect is Ideal for Law Enforcement Screening

Hi

To follow-up on our "Slow to Hire and Quick to Fire" message in last month's newsletter, we just released a new video to remind law enforcement of the importance of doing everything possible to avoid hiring any "bad apples." Such hires, as we've seen, can lead to long-lasting repercussions — including long-term damage to an agency's reputation.

This is why every law enforcement needs to make EyeDetect part of the screening process. It's fast, affordable, accurate, and 100% unbiased. It's especially helpful when it comes to screening lateral transfers and making sure all previous disciplinary action has been disclosed.

This video was featured on the July 18 Armstrong Williams Show. You can also watch this new law enforcement video here.

"EyeDetect: One of the Best Advancements for Vetting Personnel"

To continue the discussion of screening public safety personnel, let's again turn to Chief Norman Bradley's experience with EyeDetect. As the head of the Northwest Fire District in Tucson, AZ, Chief Bradley says, "Because fire service is very well respected and trusted by the public, we must do everything we can to ensure employees are trustworthy." Read more of Chief Bradley's comments in this press release.

Helping State Depts. of Corrections Avoid Bad Press

We also have a new video explaining how EyeDetect can provide more effective screening and investigations of personnel and parolees at a state department of corrections. These same benefits apply in managing jails and prisons. Watch the video here.
