EyeDetect Hailed by Utah Press as a “Game-Changer”

This month I had two interviews with news outlets in Salt Lake City, Utah regarding EyeDetect. Both were very positive.

The first was Fox 13 News. The anchor said that EyeDetect “could be a game-changer in criminal investigations.” We already know it is (see our October 2019 newsletter). This in-depth segment gave me the opportunity to explain EyeDetect in detail. The reporter also mentioned how the Idaho Internet Crimes Against Children (ICAC) group used the technology in a sex offender sting operation, and how a New Mexico Judicial District Court allowed EyeDetect test results as evidence. Reporter John Franchi even took a numbers test and, yes, EyeDetect identified his number accurately.

Converus Service Partner and private investigator Brett Magleby was also interviewed. “EyeDetect gives attorneys an opportunity to introduce additional evidence,” he said.

The Fox 13 News report aired 4 times in the Salt Lake City market and was also picked up in 8 additional markets: Cleveland, Denver, Detroit, Ft. Meyers, Kansas City, Phoenix, San Diego and West Palm Beach.

I was also interviewed by one of the top talk radio programs in Utah, “The Rod Arquette Show.” The host called EyeDetect “just fascinating” and asked a lot of great questions. You can listen to this interview here.

I’m sure as the popularity and usage of EyeDetect continues to grow, so will its press coverage.
